LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

BY LAST EVENING'S MAILS. Washington. Washington, June 27-2 P. M.

Funeral Obsequies of General Jackson. This was the day set apart for the funeral co quies in respect to the memory of Gen. Jackson. The day was very fine, and the whole population has been on the move since an early hour. All the public offices have been closed, and the stores and the houses on Pennsylvania avenue are principally hung with black. The procession moved from the President's house at 1 o'clock, headed by the military. The President of the United States, and all the dignitaries of the government, followed in carriages. The various associations, grand lodges, and other societies of the District, were in the line. The clerks of the civil government, numbering over six hundred, made a very respectable appearance in the procession. The turn out was quite general, and the cavalcade are just about entering the Capitol square, where Mr. Bancroft is to deliver the sulogy, from the eastern portico. uies in respect to the memory of Gen. Fourth Day's Proceedings of the New Court Martial—The Funeral Solemnities, $c.

The Court met this morning at the usual hour, 10 o'clock. The journal of yesterday was read, corrected and approved. The Judge Advocate asked the accused if he had any further, or other, objections to prefer to the charges and specifications. The counsel for the accused immediately proceeded to read to the Court, with their permission, his objections to the third specification of the first charges in not issuing an order when corpressal punishment was to be inflicted, and having it read to the officers and crew of the vessels, which was a vielation of the naval law of 1840. The counsel based his objections to the validity of the specification, according to law, on the following strong grounds. That no case is mentioned, or particularly designated, m the specification; that the rule of law when such a charge is made requires the act to be specified, and the precise time of its transpiring to be mentioned; the specification does neither; but referred the accused to a period of thirty-two months, and the log book, to find, out the acts, and that it was impossible to know what one it is applied to. No person named as having suffered, or when corporal punishment had been inflicted, and that the specification, the accused would, path the total path of the counsel for the maintained that the second charge of the counsel for his accused to answer, not only the was referred to the log book to find them. As well might the Secretary of the Navy have referred him to any Encyclopedia. The counsel further maintained that the second charge, and accompanying specification, and on reopening, the Judge Advocate announced to the accused that his objections to the simple specification of the first charge were maintained, and that to said specification, in order to hold the accused that a sufficient of the charge, which recommiting charge, and accompanying specification of the Congress, andorwing to the cause of the charge, and accompanying specificatio with disgust; and the young rascal should have been kept at home. A peddler of small things, trash, &c., was hawking through the crowd "the life and last dying confession of Henry McCurry," who was hung at Baltimore for the murder, of Paul Houx. This was infamous, and the chap should have been obliged to have retired from the ground penniless, whereas he sold many of his "confessions."

the ground penniless, whereas he sold many of his "confessions."

EXECUTION OF HENRY MCCURRY.—The majesty of the law has been complied with. Henry McCurry, convicted at the February term of Baltimore City Court, of the murder of Paul Roux, yesterday morning, between the hours of eleven and twelve o'clock, explated his crime upon the scaffold.

At a comparatively early hour in the morning the reporter visited his cell, and found him engaged in conversation with his attending priest, the Rev. Dr. Coskery.

Previous to the reporter's entering the cell, McCurry had been engaged, with his spiritual adviser, in religious exercises; which were subsequently continued, with but slight intervals of conversation, up to the moment when he left the cell for the the place of execution.

His countenance showed no trace whatever of apprehension or fear in reference to the dreadful ordeal through which he was about to pass. On the contrary it indicated a degree of calinness, humility and resignation to his fate which could scarcely have been anticipated. He conversed freely, if spoken to, and when any questions were addressed to him answered them with the most apparent cheerfulness. His deportment remained the same during all the time the reporter was in the cell; and, while mingling in the religious exercises of the occasion, his responses were made in a tone of voice distinctly audible to all around him.

When asked by Mr. Coskery if he felt afraid to die, he said he did not and intimated his assent to the Rev. gentleman's remarks, that it was not'death which mortals were to fear, but the judgment which came after it, as well as to the hope expressed by Mr. C. that he had so used the time of his confinement as to prepare him properly to meet that, relying upon a saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

In the course of the ceremony the Rev. Mr. Coskery was joined by the Rev. Mr. Hickey, who aided him in the remaining religious exercises.

In the course of the ceremony the Rev. Mr. Coskery was joined by the Rev. Mr. Hickey, who aided him in the remaining religious exercises.

At eleven o'clock, deputy sheriffs R. Wilson and J. T. Laws entered the cell, and with the aid of Mr. Jacob Cook, police officer, arrayed the prisoner in the usual dress. When these officers first approached the prisoner and shook hands with him, he turned, for a single instant, deathly pale, but his countenance almost immediately recovered its former color.

At twenty-five minutes past eleven o'clock, he was taken from the cell to the place of execution, followed by a procession limited to his attending priests, the Warden of the Jail, the High Sheriff, his deputies, and the reporters of the press generally. On the way the psalm Misservere, or Have Mercy on me, Oh God, was sung.—At twenty-three minutes before twelve he ascended the scaffold, accompanied by the Sheriff, the Warden, and then priests. After a moment or two spent in prayer with him by the Rev. Mr. Coskery all left him, and at twenty minutes before twelve he was launched into eternity.

He struggled but very little; and when lowered down it was found by the attending physician that his neck had been broken by the first shock.

The surrounding eminences in every direction, as well as the jail yard, were filled with a dense crowd of men, women and children, comprising many thousand persons who had assembled to witness the execution.

Too much credit cannot he awarded to High Sheriff Tracy, to T. O Sollers, Esq. Warden of the Jail, and the officers generally under their control, for the manner in which the whole proceeding was conducted, and the good order and decorum preserved within the walls; and the conduct of the High Sheriff in performing the pain fully et impressive duty which the law devolved upon him, of officiating himself to the last, instead of transfering that fully, as used to be the practice, to some Irresponsible agent, is deserving of all commendation.

The body was taken down at twenty-two minutes
